

ILLUSTRATIVE DESIGN EXAMPLE — fictional business and fictional site outcome. No live website or AI-search result was used.

SHORTLIST · MINIMUM ASSESSMENT

We could not confirm enough to give you a useful assessment.

A good report says this plainly. It should never fill gaps with generic advice or pretend it found evidence that was not there.

WHAT WE COULD NOT CONFIRM

There was not enough accessible public website information.

In this fictional scenario, the submitted website could not provide enough readable information to identify its services, service area, or useful customer evidence safely.

What happened

LIMITED RESULT

Website evidence was insufficient

We could not confirm the core service, Auckland context, or a useful set of customer-facing information from the fictional website pages.

Illustrative reason: `evidence_insufficient`. A real report would keep the detailed technical cause private.

NOT RUN

No dated AI-search test is shown

Without enough evidence to define a fair business-type question, a real system should not invent one or produce an unsupported comparison.

What this does and does not mean

It does not mean the business is poor, invisible, or unable to win customers. It only means this bounded automated review could not safely confirm enough from the public information available at that time.

A helpful next step

Check that a visitor can easily find a plain description of the service, the area served, and a way to get in touch. You can then try the assessment again with a valid public domain.
